CZAR, REACHING ACROSS SEAS FOR REFUGEE, FAILS

Jan Pouren, Revolutionist, Wins Extradition Fight After Two Years in Tombs.

MANY IN HIS DEFENSE

Enemies of Russia Pursue Litigation for Prisoner's Freedom in Two Trials.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Jan Pouren, refugee from Russia, who had been in the Tombs since December, 1907, awaiting the outcome of extradition proceedings, won his long fight for freedom yesterday when United States Commissioner Hitchcock in the Federal Court discharged him from custody. The finding was that while Pouren had been guilty of the crimes charged by the Government of Russia, which included murder, arson and burglary, he had acted as a revolutionist and not with criminal intent. Pouren was overjoyed when he heard this verdict, and he tried to kiss the hand of the Commissioner.

Pouren's case constitutes one of the most remarkable international episodes of recent history. Every possible pressure was brought to bear by the Russian authorities and their representatives in this country to have him deported, but enemies of the Russian Government rallied to his support, committees of citizens were formed, funds were raised to procure his release and the litigation was pursued through several stages to a successful issue. After his discharge Pouren said his plans were in the hands of these friends.

It was just after the suppression of the revolt of 1907 in the Russian peasant districts that Pouren sought asylum in this country. He was detained at Ellis Island at the request of Couderc Brothers, attorneys for the Russian Government, who asked for his extradition in accordance with the treaty existing between the two nations. This treaty, however, gave immunity to those who had committed political offenses and provided for extradition only where it was proved that the refugee had acted for criminal purposes.

Experts for Defense. Herbert Parsons, now a Representative in Congress, was engaged as counsel for Pouren and he associated with him Prof. Isaac Hourwich, an authority on Russian jurisprudence, and Simon O. Mallock. While the Russian Government wanted Pouren as a band who had slaughtered women and babies, his friends declared that he was a patriot and a victim of "Russian oppression." Nevertheless, when the case was heard by United States Commissioner Hitchcock last October, a verdict was found and his deportation was ordered.

No time was lost in taking an appeal and from every part of the country letters were written to the State Department protesting against the extradition of Pouren. Eventually, in response to the widespread interest aroused, Secretary Root ordered that the case be reopened. Pouren's attorney asked that another commissioner be appointed to take the testimony and Samuel Hitchcock was selected. He began the second trial late in October and it has dragged on ever since. Witnesses were brought from Russia by both sides and a great mass of testimony was taken. In his decision Commissioner Hitchcock upheld the findings in the previous case, declaring that Pouren had been proved guilty of the crimes charged against him by the testimony of his associates in their revolutionary movement.

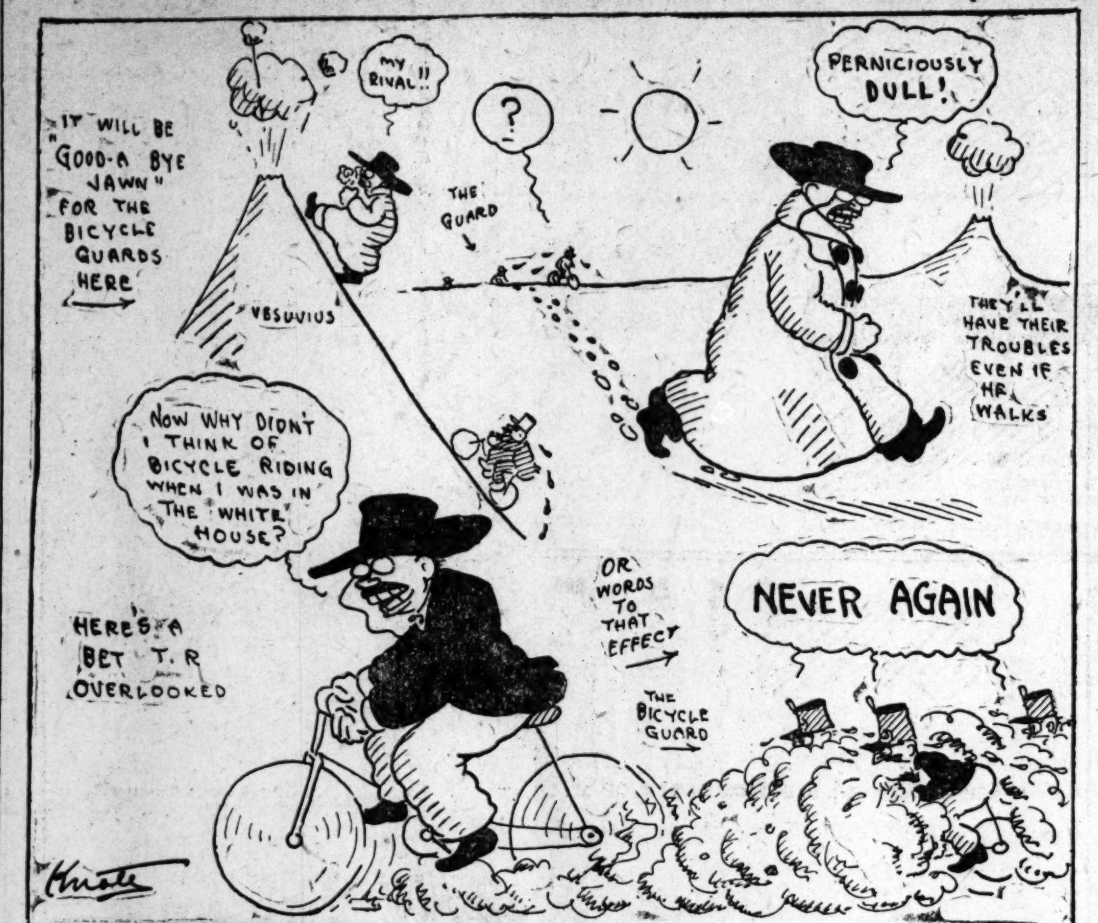

The question at issue, however, was whether these crimes had been committed for criminal or political reasons, and he took the latter view.

Revolution Not a Crime. He deduced that all of the acts had been committed while the Riga district was still in a state of revolution. Martial law governed the peasants and when Pouren joined in the "Brothers of the Woods," a guerrilla party, all the offenders against the Russian laws were tried by court-martial. Every one of the offenses, he held, was committed prior to the official end of the outbreak. He furthermore brought out that Pouren had not acted for personal gain, but to aid the revolutionary party.

However revolting these may have been, said the Commissioner, "we must consider that they were committed while the country was in a revolution and were more or less justified." In his release, Pouren was taken to the office of Mr. Pollock, and after he went to the office of his lawyer, where he met many friends, including members of the Pouren Defense Committee. This body will look after him for the present and see that he does not share the plight of Rudolfs, who, after his liberation, became a vagrant in Chicago.

Mr. Pollock said that Pouren was deeply grateful for the aid rendered him by Mr. Parsons, as well as by Rudolfs and others. He added that Commissioner Hitchcock had been obliged to go back into old Russian laws and customs, and that the work entailed a great amount of research. He thought that Pouren had been open in Pouren's case, exclusive of his counsel's fees.

BABY PLAYS WITH FIRE AND FACE AND BODY ARE BURNED
Mother Carries Little One in Her Arms to Surgical Ward of City Hospital.

Holding in her arms her 2-year-old daughter, dangerously burned, Mrs. Sada Demont of 228 Edwards street refused Wednesday to relinquish the child to the stretcher carriers at the City Hospital. She insisted on carrying the little one to the surgical ward.

The girl, Santa Demont, was playing on the kitchen floor when her mother threw a strip of waste paper into the fire. The child pulled out the blazing strip and her clothes were ignited. The mother threw her wrapper about little Santa, putting out the flames, but the child's face, back and shoulders had been burned so that her recovery is doubtful.

Kodol CURES INDIGESTION WHEN IT DIGESTS FOOD
You can't have indigestion or dyspepsia when food is digested in your stomach as it should be. All such ailments result from undigested food. Kodol gently assists Nature, for a time, to digest the food—then the stomach gets strong and doesn't need assistance. So it's easy to see how Kodol cures indigestion when it digests food—it can't help it. Whenever you have gas on the stomach, headaches, "heartburn," pain in pit of stomach, etc., your food is not digesting.

Our Guarantee. If you are not benefited—let a dollar back. We will refund your money. Don't hesitate; try it. The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the 50c bottle. Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

STRANGE ORDEAL NECESSARY FOR VISITS TO BABY

Mother's Clothing Rendered Contagion Proof Twice Daily at Hospital.

In order that she might spend an hour each day with her 4-year-old boy, Martin, who is in the contagious ward at the City Hospital, Mrs. John Moskovitz of 2009 O'Fallon street, goes through a strange ordeal every afternoon.

The little boy has cerebro-spinal meningitis, an extremely contagious disease. It is necessary for Mrs. Moskovitz to be disinfected twice every time she visits him, so that she may not catch the disease or carry it with her to the neighborhood where she lives. Each afternoon when she calls at the City Hospital she is taken to the disinfecting room. There she is required to remove her outer garments. She is sprayed with a powerful disinfectant and then she is clothed in a long oiled silk gown which covers her from her neck to her feet.

A rubber cap is fitted over her head so that it covers every strand of her hair. In this strange garb she goes into the contagious ward, where she sits an hour at her baby's bedside. When the visit is ended she again passes into the disinfecting room. In the meantime the clothing which she left there has been fumigated. Before she dons it she is required to wash her face, hands and hair with an antiseptic solution.

The report of the City Hospital for the fiscal year ending Wednesday shows that since April 1, 1908, 9464 cases have been treated and there have been 108 deaths. In the month just closing there were 108 deaths, a higher number than in any other month of the fiscal year.

Complicated Financial Deal.
"She came into my store at 3458 Humphrey street last Tuesday evening," said the grocer, "and bought 15 cents' worth of gelatine. She laid down a $10 bill, and I gave her a $5 bill and $4.85 in smaller bills and change. She put the $5 bill in her purse at once, then she took 15 cents out and said: 'Oh, I haven't the exact change. Please give me a $5 bill for this change,' and she put her 15 cents on the $4.85. I handed out another $5, and she put it with the change and said: 'Now give me a $10 bill for this, please.'"

"Of course, the change was mine, and I said 'Say, what are you trying to do here? Do you think you can short change me?'"

"The minute I said that she grabbed her $5, left my change and ran out." Mrs. Miller's lawyers argued that nothing had been shown to prove that her action was not a mistake, due to her own momentary confusion.

"Well, I will listen to her explanation," said the Court.

"There is nothing to explain," said the lawyer. "The State has proved nothing."

Judge Taylor ruled otherwise. Several keepers of small business establishments have complained of being cheated by a woman short-change operator, whose mode of making $5 was similar to that described by the grocer.

BRIDE LOSES HER BOY HUSBAND BY HABEAS CORPUS

Mother of Wealthy Youth Is Trying to Annul His Marriage to Servant.

SANDUSKY, O., March 31.—Mother and bride are fighting here today for the possession of 17-year-old Valentine Fries Jr., heir to half a million dollars. On Oct. 30 young Fries eloped with Hazel Brockett, a pretty servant in his mother's house at Huron, and a year his senior.

Proceedings were brought to annul the marriage because the boy was a minor. Yesterday his mother sent a lawyer and a sheriff to Cleveland and by habeas corpus proceedings tore the youthful husband from the arms of his weeping bride and brought him to this city.

When the Sheriff appeared at the house where the young couple were living with the girl's relatives he was told the boy-husband was too sick to be moved.

A physician called in by the mother's attorney gave a different verdict, and in spite of the young wife's tears and entreaties he was put on the train and brought to Sandusky today.

FORTY POSTCARDS DO NOT PROVE WIFE'S BAD INTENT

Court Rules Husband Was Justified in Being Angry, but That Evidence Did Not Show Misconduct.

Letters from another man, found by a husband in a wife's possession, justify him in being jealous and angry, but they do not always make out a strong case for him in the divorce court, according to Circuit Judge Williams.

In taking Mrs. Helen Bindschadler's divorce suit and Edward Bindschadler's crossbill under advisement, Judge Williams said, more to the lawyers than to the principals:

"You have made a mountain of a molehill. This case contains one very serious charge—a charge against the wife, which, being made and not proved, constitutes a greater indignity on the husband's part than any of the indignities he is charged with."

Speaking of the two letters and 40 postcards which Bindschadler found in his wife's bureau drawer, Judge Williams said:

"I do not attach significance to this mass of testimony. Any man could have written these letters to a woman without her knowledge or consent. They do not prove bad intent on the wife's part. Anyone might have sent her postcards in a similar manner."

"I do not regard anything that happened between these young people during their married life as ground for a divorce. Still, the letters found by the husband were quite sufficient to make him feel as he did. I attach no blame to him for being angry, or for his refusal to ask for or listen to any explanation. Most men would probably have done as he did."

The principal issue in the case, testimony in which ended yesterday afternoon, is the custody. Norma Bindschadler, 5 years old. The child is now with her mother at the home of Mrs. Bindschadler's father, David Loewen, 614 Westminster place.

Mrs. Bindschadler, in her testimony, said the letters were written by Ross Y. Rimes, a Louisville traveling man. She expressed surprise when her husband's lawyer informed her that Rimes had a wife and three children.

She said the letters had been written without her permission, and that she only replied had been to tell Rimes not to write again until he had a right to. She explained this, in her testimony, as referring to the fact that she was married. She met Rimes at her brother's hotel in Elkhart, Ok., where she and her husband lived for a time.

Here's the Ten Thousand Dollar Song!
No music trade happening in recent years has created so much comment as Jerome H. Remick & Co.'s purchase of the popular ballad, "I Wish I Had a Girl." To secure the sole publishing rights, this enterprising concern paid the record price of $10,000.00. But witnesses in the business declare that the song would be a bargain even at a still higher figure. Few bars of the chorus are reproduced above, and all that is left to try them and see if you don't think the song is catchy both in words and tune. Leading vaudeville artists are already singing "I Wish I Had a Girl" with tremendous success. The publishers are running their presses day and night to supply demand everywhere.

The Widow Says

That Luck in Love Consists in Keeping Out of It.

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By HELEN ROWLAND.

"I've just had my fortune told," announced the Widow, glancing interestedly at the lines in her small, jeweled hand.

"Humph!" remarked the Bachelor, "I'd have told you your fortune—for nothing! You're going to marry a nice-looking bachelor with good shoulders and a noble nose."

"And a tiny, little bald spot," put in the Widow, maliciously.

"But you're a bad fortune-teller, Mr. Traveller."

"What?"

"Well," explained the Widow, "you don't want your palm crossed with silver, and you don't wear a pointed card and a long cape covered with gilt stars and crescents, and you prophesy unlucky things and—"

"UNLUCKY THINGS!" exclaimed the Bachelor, indignantly. "Don't you consider it real 'luck in love' to be able to marry a charming, intelligent, high-minded person?"

"Not at all!" broke in the Widow, hastily. "Real luck in love consists entirely in keeping out of it!"

"Why?"

"The Bachelor drew a long, long puff of his cigar before replying. 'Ah, well!' He mused thoughtfully. The mere fact of marrying me wouldn't necessarily indicate that you were in love."

"No-o," agreed the Widow, doubtfully. "After all, that might be real luck in marriage."

"Oh!" exclaimed the Bachelor, delightedly. "Then you DO want me."

"That is not the point," retorted the Widow. "Luck in marriage consists not in getting the person you want, but in getting the person who wants YOU."

"Anybody can do that!" declared the Bachelor, scornfully.

"Anybody can become President!" rejoined the Widow, "but most of them slighted the Widow, sadly. "Matrimony is a bargain—and somebody has to get the bargain. The other must take the leavings and be satisfied."

"Nice world this would be," grumbled the Bachelor, bitterly. "If everyone took your advice and went about searching for somebody to adore him—"

"Oh, that never will happen," interrupted the Widow, cheerfully. "There always will be plenty of fools and idealists in the world who will cling to the belief that happiness in marriage consists in making a martyr of one's self. Just as there always will be plenty of lambs in Wall street who will give the bulls and bears a chance to make their millions. But there isn't any happiness in marriage," she added sorrowfully, "because you can't be happy with the person whom you love—and you can't be happy without him!"

"Then why not try being happy with somebody who loves you?" suggested the Bachelor, eagerly. "I'm willing to weigh in on the wrong side."

"What?"

"Well," explained the Widow, "you don't want your palm crossed with silver, and you don't wear a pointed card and a long cape covered with gilt stars and crescents, and you prophesy unlucky things and—"

THE SEAT NEAREST THE RADIO.

"And to take the milk off the dumb-waiter and give you three-quarters of the steak and—"

"I don't believe you!" cried the Widow, vehemently. "But if you were?"

"You'd marry me!" broke in the Bachelor, excitedly.

"Never!" declared the Widow, with a shudder. "I'd hate to marry a bull or a bear, but I'd prefer even a bygone to anything as meek and humble and easy as a lamb—with mint sauce, besides," she added with conviction, "I'd like you too well to marry you."

"Thanks—awfully," returned the Bachelor, with a sigh of relief.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

From the North American Review.

ON New Year's day over half a million men and women in the British Isles trooped into the nearest Postoffice and drew their first pension of from 25 cents to $1.25. On every successive Friday so long as they live they will do the same.

All through the kingdom many pathetic scenes were witnessed when the great day arrived. The gratitude of the pensioners, when what had seemed for so long "too good to be true" materialized in silver coin across the counter, was a spectacle to move the heart of the sternest economist. One old lady presented the Postmaster with the wing of a goose, impressing upon him the value of the pension for pensioners. Many pensioners were accompanied by large parties of friends to see them through the ordeal. The queerest rumors had obtained currency. One pensioner, a retired seaman, refused at the last moment to take the money, being convinced that it came from the Salvation Army. Another was hardly to be persuaded that the receipt of it did not involve conscription for her sons. Many believed that there would not be enough money to go round, and gathered outside the Postoffice hours before they were served in order to be the first to be served. Many others doubted even to the last whether it was not all an incredible fairy tale. All over the country public houses and restaurants were filled with the pensioners of the day by entertaining the pensioners of their neighborhood to tea and dinner. The kindness, patience and helpfulness of the Postoffice officials and of the general public when a pensioner presented himself with his book of vouchers were delightful to watch. The right of way was given him unhesitatingly. Nobody seemed to mind how long he was kept waiting, so long as the aged and infirm claimants were promptly attended to. There was a universal conspiracy to make the pensioners feel that everybody shared in their happiness; and one could hardly go into a Postoffice on the private business of buying stamps or dispatching a telegram without finding one's self in the midst of some little demonstration of joy and thankfulness. It was very noticeable, too, that the pensioners accepted the bounty of the State not as an inviolable form of relief, but as an honorable reward. Old soldiers went with medals on their breasts, and most of the civilian applicants donned their "Sunday best" for the occasion.

MR. MILLIONAIRE

Less Moonshine, More Matrimony

No. V. The Bridegroom Chooses Between a Yellow Tie and a Yellow Steak.

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH.

MYSTERIOUSLY the bride opened the small top bureau drawer sacred to the bridegroom's lesser apparel. There they were side by side with the gloves and the collar and the handkerchiefs.

"Surely they were so utterly beautiful he could not help liking them. It was the bridegroom's birthday, and the bride wore her loveliest gown and most adoring expression in his honor.

Also she had bought him presents—perfectly glorious things that she had laid carefully in the bureau drawer for him to discover when he looked for a collar and necktie before dinner.

Which one would he think the prettiest? The new shawl, the flower of peaches—and this? They call it "cloud gray." It just has a tiny line of the new "Salome pink."

At the words "Salome pink" the bridegroom burst into a horselaugh. "Salome pink?" he queried. "Why, they'd beat me in the office if I walked in with that thing on. Maybe somebody would give me a slap on the wrist."

Sadly the bride gathered up her precious purchases. "Very well, I will wear them myself," she said, meekly. Then her eyes welled over. A big tear splashed right in the middle of the yellow tie. "I thought you would love them," she said, tremulously.

And the bridegroom perceived suddenly the havoc he had wrought. He gazed at the bride and neckties in his arms. "Do love them," he asserted. "They're beautiful. I was only teasing you. There—please don't cry on my account. I'll tell you what we'll do. Let's celebrate. I'll take you out to dinner and to a show, and I'll wear one of 'em. Which one do you like the best?"

The bride's smile broke with rainbow splendor through her tears. "The yellow tie," she said, absolutely without malice.

The bridegroom swallowed hard. But what young husband would not prefer a yellow tie to a yellow steak?

"All right," he said. "I'll wear it. Kiss me and get ready."

This Recipe for Home-Made Cough Cure Is Worth Saving.

Most of the suffering and most of the serious diseases that result from colds and coughs could be entirely prevented if the proper medicine were on hand and could be taken conveniently when the first signs of trouble appeared.

By saving the recipe given below you will always have an excellent prescription for colds and coughs. Or, rather, by making up the remedy you will always have it handy. A teaspoonful dose, taken when the first symptoms arise, will ward off a vast amount of suffering and possible danger.

This is the recipe:

Granulated Sugar Syrup.....1½ oz.
Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a pint bottle and fill up the bottle with the Granulated Sugar Syrup, made as follows: Take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add one-half cup of water, stir and let boil just a moment. If kept well corked it will never spoil, so that this pint of cough medicine will last a family a long time. It can be made in five minutes at a total cost of about 54 cents, and is very pleasant to take. Dose: A teaspoonful every one, two or three hours as required.

Simple as it is, it is in every way superior to the ready-made syrups that cost five or six times as much. Obsolete, deep-seated coughs usually yield to it inside of twenty-four hours. It is also an excellent remedy for whooping cough, pains in the chest, bronchial troubles, hoarseness, etc.

In using this recipe get the real Pinex, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract and is vastly superior to the weaker pine oil or pine tar preparations. Your druggist has it or will gladly sell it for you if you ask him.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives and publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

Special Notice To Fat People

"I am giving you here the only prescription known that will safely, surely and quickly reduce your fat to normal," said Dr. Jones to his fat afflicted patient. "Besides it will at the same time greatly build up your muscular strength and health."

"Go to the drug store, get a package of Reagen. You eat it like fruit or candy and easily and safely reduce your fat a pound a day."

There is nothing "just as good" as Reagen. For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per full-sized box, or by mail prepaid, by the Reagen Co., 2108 Reno Bldg., Detroit, Mich. The company will gladly send you a trial package free by mail if you write direct to Detroit, no free package at drug stores.

Reagen is for sale and recommended in St. Louis by Johnson, Jew, Broadway and Franklin; Robinson & Co., Broadway and Leavenworth; Judge & Pugh, 215 Olive st., drugists.

WHEN CLUBWOMEN MEET

A Few Reflections for the Post-Dispatch

By EDITH SESSIONS TUPPER.

DOES the woman's club really provide love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, humility and other fruits of the spirit? Or does it provoke hatred, variance, wrath, strife, emulations, backbitings, divers works of the flesh?

"I was born and brought up in the country," said a woman to me recently, "and in my youth attended many county sewing societies, and never at one have I heard such outrageous scandal, such attacks upon the characters of women, as I have heard in certain clubs in this town."

So long as a woman remains quietly in the rank and file of a club she escapes this sort of thing, but the moment she comes up as a candidate the furies are let loose. Her past is scraped up and put in a fine tooth comb. If she has been guilty of indiscretions some lynx-eyed scandal-monger will drag them forth. If she has a skeleton in her closet some four-tongued gossip will rattle its bones. Of course the same woman takes this in bad, presumably ladies, in the heat of battle accuse fellow members behind their backs of lying, stealing, cheating, swindling—everything short of murder.

The hostesses entertained their guests with scandal saute, served with tabasco sauce, anent other clubwomen. When the guests left, the man seemed dejected and sullen. The young woman asked him what had annoyed him.

"If those women are a fair sample of clubwomen," he said, "I should advise you to get out of all club life as fast as possible."

Club life fosters envy. A woman cannot bear to see a woman whom she personally dislikes, advanced to club honors. She will move heaven and earth to prevent that consummation. Envyings and jealousies are assets of a woman's club quite as much as the gavel and the constitution.

The woman's club is short on long suffering and forbearance. A club is as touchy as Teddy Roosevelt on the subject of criticism. Last year there was an upheaval in a certain well-known club which has received a lot of good-natured chaffing at the hands of the press; the club endeavored to keep all details from the busy reporters. But some way the news of the row leaked out and the fun was fast and furious.

One little girl reporter made a particularly spicy account of the ladies' battle. The women, instead of laughing at the story, ran amuck. There was no name they did not hurl at the unfortunate reporter. The president of this club said in open meeting that she had told this girl she would demand her discharge from the paper she represented.

"The girl cried and begged me not to do this," stated this kind, charitable lady, "but I shall, and what's more, I don't care a rap if she starves to death."

As a promoter of Christian virtues, the woman's club would seem not to be a howling success.

A BAD MAN.

HERMAN WHITAKER wrote a story of the Tehuacan rubber plantation, Guadalupe, the mandator on one plantation at which Mr. Whitaker stayed, was informed that he was to be one of the characters in his story. "I never did it to question me each day as to the things I had done," he said in the story, "says Mr. Whitaker. "When, one morning, I informed him that I had killed him off, he expressed great surprise.

"Because, Senor, porque?"

"Because you are a bad man, Guadalupe," which was perfectly true.

"I Senor?" he questioned, greatly surprised.

"Si, Guadalupe, you are bad. Think of how many men you have killed according to your own count."

"He thought for a while, then looked up with a humorous smile. 'Oh, well! Did I put up a good fight?'

"You bet you did, Guadalupe."

"Thereupon eyebrows and shoulders went up in a shrug. 'Bueno! Bueno! Then it see all right!'

A CURIOUS OATH.

WHAT is regarded as the quaintest oath still in use is that taken by the High Court judges in the Isle of Man, the terms of which are as follows: "By this book and the contents thereof, and by the wonderful works that God hath miraculously wrought in the heaven above and the earth beneath in six days and six nights, I do swear that I will, without respect of favor or friendship, loss or gain, consanguinity or affinity, envy or malice, execute the laws of this Isle justly, between party and party as differently as the herring backbone doth lie in the midst of the fish. So help me God and the contents of this book."

WHICH IS RIGHT?

TWO Pittsburg women have engaged in a dispute that should offer relaxation and a subject for argument for debating societies for years to come. Mrs. A. borrowed a dozen eggs from Mrs. B. Some weeks later Mrs. A. returned 12 eggs to Mrs. B. The transaction was apparently completed, but Mrs. B. was dissatisfied.

"When I loaned the eggs," she said, "they were 30 cents a dozen. They are now 35 cents. Bring me 15 more eggs."

"You loaned me a dozen eggs," was the reply. "I have returned a dozen eggs. Good day."

The question is: Which is right?

CLANDESTINE ESCAPADES

No. 2. In a Series of Talks on Matrimony for the Post-Dispatch.

By REV. MADISON C. PETERS.

HAPPINESS in the married life is possible only to those who have deliberately chosen each other, not in momentary passion, but for solid worth of character.

The burden of married life is heavy enough even under the most favorable conditions. Other things being equal, there is more chance of happiness between persons whose habits, tastes and education would put them somewhere near upon a basis of equality than between those who are widely separated in social position.

That every man is the equal of every other man sounds well enough in the Declaration of Independence, but it is not true to the facts of life and experience.

One man is not the equal of every other man, any more than one horse is the equal of every other horse. Hens' eggs are worth a dollar a piece if the pedigree is satisfactory.

Stock-raisers refuse to breed from mean and tricky animals, temper as well as speed and productiveness are hereditary. Pedigree is the important question today in every form of stock-raising save the human.

I know coachmen who in point of intelligence and most looks, moral and even social worth, are not only the equals, but the superiors of the men who employ them.

"A jewel is a jewel still, though lying in the dust."

And sand is sand, though up to heaven thrust."

But when you find such a man he won't elope with his employer's daughter.

Tears will never undo what you should never have done at first. The tears may bring a father's forgiveness, but that will never transform the stableman to the drawing-room.

But what if a man of integrity, reliability and solid worth, though a coachman, should fall in love with his employer's daughter? Let them not

WEAK STOMACHS

Some time, through neglect, or sympathetic weakness, it is impossible for the stomach to assimilate what it most needs. In such cases it becomes necessary to administer a neutralizing mixture to prevent the formation of gas in the intestines, and give the stomach an opportunity to resume its functions.

For this purpose the following formula has been recommended: One-half ounce sodium phosphate, one ounce essence of walnut, one-half teaspoonful baking soda, enough pure water to make eight ounces. It has been claimed that this simple mixture, taken two teaspoonfuls before each meal, will stimulate the gastric juices, check fermentation in the intestines and thus aid the stomach in assimilating its natural functions.

On this out, in case you may sometimes need it. Any druggist can make up this mixture at a cost not exceeding 50 or 60 cents.

A Treat to Make the Family Eat

Give them a surprise. A dish of steaming Faust Spaghetti. How they will enjoy it! They'll ask for more. They'll want you to repeat the treat. That will make it easy for you, for there are so many different ways of serving Faust Spaghetti. A more adaptable food would be hard to find. A more economical food couldn't be found.

FAUST BRAND SPAGHETTI

means easy cooking, mealtime variety, maximum nourishment at minimum cost. Keep a package handy. Spaghetti soup-to-day, a Spaghetti side dish or dessert to-morrow, a more complete dish next time—and so on. This would be impossible with any other food, but variety is only one of the features of Faust Spaghetti. Tastes so good, too, and always enjoyed.

Sold by nearly all grocers in five and ten cent packages.

GIRL WHO HAS EVERYTHING NOW WANTS DIVORCE

Bertha Krupp, a $100,000,000 Bride. Wishes Freedom Again.

MARRIED A POOR MAN

Kaiser Stood By When She and Dr. von Bohlen und Halbach Wed.

BERLIN, March 31.—The romance of Bertha Krupp, daughter of the great gunmaker and one of the world's richest women, is waning, German newspapers say. It is reported that her romantic marriage to Dr. von Bohlen und Halbach, which was celebrated in the Kaiser's presence two years and a half ago, is soon to be made the subject of a divorce suit.

Bertha Krupp's marriage aroused interest all over the world. She was in her nineteenth year and, despite the fact that her fortune reached the proportions of a hundred million or more and that she was head of the great concern that equips the navies of the world with their armaments, she was a simple, modest maiden. And her marriage was to be one of love alone.

The Kaiser stood sponsor. Her immense wealth had not robbed her of ingenuous girlishness. The manufacture of cannon had not hardened her heart, for she was and is "the good angel" of the 60,000 employees of the Krupp factories, mines and transportation lines. The Kaiser was especially interested in her and expressed a desire to stand sponsor for her in a social career of regal brilliance.

She preferred, however, to live unostentatiously at Essen, the seat of the Krupp industry, managing her property and looking after the welfare of her workmen and their families, just as her celebrated father had done.

The man who had won the heart of the philanthropist heiress was Lieut. Gustav von Bohlen und Halbach, poor but of aristocratic descent, and possessed of much ability. He was 35 years old, a graduate of several universities and had led a life of adventure. When the engagement was announced he was a member of the German diplomatic legation at Rome. Shortly before the marriage he resigned.

Like most German students, he had given much attention to sociology. It was believed that he would be able to render valuable assistance to his young wife in the execution of her ideas for the benefit of the Krupp community.

On the day of the wedding, Oct. 15, 1906, Essen, the model city, wore its gala dress. The Emperor was there, a guest at the Krupp home. Distinguished men and famous women of the empire and foreigners of prominence were among the many guests. Rarely, if ever, had a civilian marriage in Germany been marked by such state and circumstance.

After the marriage Herr von Bohlen und Halbach and his bride went into retirement as far as the world was concerned. Devoting all their time to domestic life and the affairs of the great institution of which she was the head, so far as the public knew the union had been crowned with all the happiness it seemed to promise in the beginning.

August 14, 1907, a son was born. The baby, half-appearing to an imperial fortune, was mentioned in the newspapers of the world as an infant prince might have been.

But some weeks ago the baby died, and then began the rumors that all was not so happy as it might be in the von Bohlen und Halbach home. Now it is asserted as a certainty that the young wife is to sue for divorce.

Jack Spratt would eat no fat
His wife would eat no lean
And so betwixt them both
They ate —

SUPREME

HAMS AND BACON

And licked the platter clean

Jack Spratt and his wife are types of a particular folk.

But, so far as Nursery lore tells us, their preferences found expression only in their like or dislike for fat or lean.

There are thousands of people more particular—who like both fat and lean.

But they want the fat in proper proportion to the lean.

That's the way Ham and Bacon should be.

And that's the way Supreme Hams and Bacon are.

But, they are more than that.

How We Select Supreme Hams and Bacon

Out of all the good, you get only the perfect.

In every process of making—from live hog to Supreme Hams and Bacon—we select only the best—reject the rest.

The hog must be corn fed and barrow—young yet mature.

The proportion of fat to lean must conform to our exacting requirements.

Supreme Hams must weigh no less than 10 pounds, but never over 16.

Skins must be smooth and tender, and free from marking. The meat firm, yet tender.

And always, they must be perfect in appearance—a delight to the eye no less than to the palate.

How We Sugar Cure

With these inviting qualities we combine our delicious Sugar Cure.

A pure solution of sugar, salt and water.

We could use cheap sugar—or even chemical sweetening compounds, still cheaper.

But we use only the best grade of Standard Granulated sugar—just like you use on your table.

Nothing else would give that rich flavor you find only in Supreme Hams and Bacon.

We even filter the water, then filter the complete Sugar Cure solution.

Then, assorted as to weight, each ham is sugar cured exactly 5 days to the pound.

Bacon, being flat, is cured more quickly—but just as exactly.

That's why Supreme Hams and Bacon, large or small, year in and out, always have exactly the same delicious flavor.

The True Hickory Flavor

Sugar Cured to a luscious flavor, now they hang in porcelain lined smoke houses—over burning Hickory logs.

From 30 feet below rises the sweet aromatic smoke—enveloping and penetrating each ham and bacon, most evenly through and through, with the old time country Hickory flavor.

Then, finally Government Inspected, and again selected by us for perfect color, they are branded Supreme.

And that means Perfect in the Highest Degree.

Now, awaiting your plans for tomorrow's meal, Supreme Ham or Supreme Bacon is ready for you.

The most delicately flavored—deliciously fragrant Ham or Bacon you can imagine.

Order yours from your dealer now.
